

APPRENTICE AWARDS

At a recent Awards Ceremony at RAF Valley the Worshipful Livery Company of Wales recognised the achievements of five young men who had been apprenticed at Babcocks, based in RAF Valley. Their apprenticeships were successfully completed, and they had become qualified aircraft engineers. On behalf of the Worshipful Livery Company of Wales presentations were made to the five young engineers by Liveryman Miss Edwina Morris-Jones.

She addressed a large gathering of family and friends saying -

“It gives me great pleasure to be with you this morning, on behalf of our Worshipful Livery Company of Wales Master Henry Gilbert, who sends his apologies.

Of course, I am more than delighted to be here with the apprentices who, we should all remember, are no longer in apprenticeship – but have become skilled aircraft engineers.

The Livery Company has affiliated links with RAF Valley and, of course, those who fall within the Valley “Family” such as Babcocks”.

The Livery Company, as you all know, provides fellowship for its members, supports education and makes Awards to develop skills and talents. It also supports it's young award winners in practical ways.

In particular, they are dedicated to helping young people throughout Wales, as you can see here today.
